The first thing that comes to mind when I think of signs of spring, is a garden, flowers, and, of course, new life (may we all be blessed with rain during the drought). In an Easter tradition, the Church displays the cross, which was a sign of the crucified savior, Jesus. It is thought that the root of our consciousness of a garden, flowers, and life was rooted in the death of Jesus. We live in a

Photograph: Museo del Tridentino/Tamasra/ANSA Italian archaeologists have located a forgotten medieval necropolis on the Sicilian coast. The find is a vast collection of stone graves on the island of Favignana, including 14th-century skeletons and fossilised human remains. Seven such burials - along with the partial remains of the skeletons of two others - were uncovered at the former site of Pavetta, a family-owned estate that once belonged to the powerful Caltagirone family. The necropolis, which covers an area of some 40 hectares, was first examined in the 1970s and lies near the mouth of the River Bisarcio in Favignana. Archaeologists from Italy and Germany are believed to be the first to use laser scanning to map the site since the discovery was announced on Monday. "I am really excited about this project," Eugenio Neri, the director of the University of Pisa's department of archaeological science and technology, said. "This is really the first time we have been able to use a laser scan to map such an extensive area with such precision." The use of lasers to map archaeological sites can provide 3
